

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

PREFACE.

HE author of this modest publication thought that the great metropolis of the Mississippi Valley, a city of 500,000 inhabitants, was badly in need of a "Guide" worthy of the name, for the accommodation of the numerous visitors who come to the city either for business or pleasure.

Having resolved to publish such a Guide, his next object was to make it of real interest; therefore, drawings were made of various Parks and Public Buildings, and by the aid of the Photo-Engraving process, the drawings were turned into engravings, so that the reader, either visitor or resident of the city, besides gaining a certain information from these pages, will have the most interesting points brought before his eye.

OF THE

CITY OF ST. LOUIS.

I the year I763, a party of resolute men, led by PIERRE LACLIDE LIGUET, started from New Orleans in search of a suitable location for a trading post. After a wearisome voyage, which extended through fall and mid-winter, they finally on the 15th of February 1764 arrived at this point, and their leader very judiciously selected it for their future home, naming it St. Louis in honor of Louis XV., the reigning monarch of France and the Louisianas.

The settlers then commenced to build houses, and trade with the Indians. They were soon joined by other adventurers, who came to share their good fortunes; so that the little colony became in a comparatively short time quite a village.

A treaty having been completed between France and Spain ceding to the latter all the provinces known as Louisianas, St. Louis became a Spanish possession, and it was under that government that on the 6th of May, 1780, the peaceable inhabitants had to resist their only attack by the Indians. Happily they were prepared to give the savages a warm reception, and after a severe fight forced them to retire, but fearing another assault, they strengthened their fortifications, which had the desired effect of keeping the enemy away for the future.

After various negotiations, on the 18th of April 1803, the United States Government bought from the Emperor Napoleon the whole of the Louisianas, and paid for it the sum of $15,000,000. It was not however until the 10th of March 1804, under the Administration of President Jefferson that this Government received full possession of this portion of the ceded territory. St. Louis was then only a village of about 1200 inhabitants, mostly of French origin, and continued about the same until the close of the Indian wars in 1815, when suddenly a new impetus was given in the shape of valuable immigration pouring in from Virginia, Tennessee and other eastern States. In the mean time. European emigrants coming through New Orleans. it became evident to the intelligent St. Louisans that their village would soon become a town, and that for the town to become a city was only a question of time.

On the 2d of August 1817 the first steamboat appeared on the mighty Mississippi. Thirty years later St. Louis had telegraph lines connecting with the East, and 1848 brought the locomotive.

In May 1849 a disastrous fire broke out on the levee; twenty-five steamboats and eight blocks of buildings were swept away, the losses amounting to $3,000,000. Then the cholera made its appearance, carrying off many victims. These two elements of destruction taught the citizens the value of a fire department and sanitary regulations.

From 1850 to 1860 prosperity and population increased in a remarkable degree, but during the war everything was brought to a stand-still. Once the noise of cannon abated, however, St. Louis began a race for supremacy with all the other cities of the West. She has nobly taken the lead, and does not intend to let her rivals get ahead.

THE BRIDGE.

HEN coming to St. Louis from the East, the traveler crosses this grand and imposing struct. ure, the pride of the city, whose completion sheds everlasting fame upon its originator, the distinguished engineer, Captain James B. Eads.

The whole length of the Bridge, including its approaches, is 6,220 feet, the bridge itself being 2,046 feet, and the abutments measuring 524 feet.

The rest is divided in three spans, two of them 502 feet in length and the centre one 520 feet.

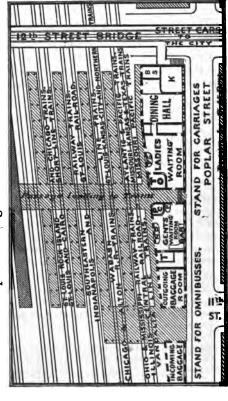

The bridge is two stories in height. The lower one is exclusively for the use of railroad trains which go through the tunnel connecting with the Union Depot; the upper one is for the use of vehicles of all descriptions, and for pedestrians, whose entrance is at the junction of Washington avenue and Third street. Five cents will secure a walk across, and a fine view of the river front and of the great American Bottom will be had, and a vivid impression is produced by the activity of the moving panorama below, steamboats, ferries, railroad trains, vehicles, etc., all of which owing to the altitude of the bridge appear like mere toys.

The visit is on the whole healthy to the body and instructive to the mind; and the stranger in search of both should not fail to take advantage of these combined inducements.

POST OFFICE AND CUSTOM HOUSE.

his building, situated on the south-east corner of Third and Olive streets, was erected in 1859, on what was considered at that time as the centre of the business portion of the city.

The narrowness of the streets surrounding it prevents the passer-by from observing and appreciating the architecture at its proper merit, but a close inspection will redeem the first impression, and the visitor will agree that if not beautiful, the building deserves respect for its commanding appearance.

On Sunday the Post Office is open from 12 to 1 P. M. at which time the corner of the streets fronting the building is covered by the thousands of merchants and business men of St. Louis who are busily engaged discussing the latest

DESCRIPTION OF

CUSTOM HOUSE AND POST OFFICE

ITH the rapid growth of this city, the building now in use having proved for a number of years past inadequate to the wants and purposes needed for the transaction of the business at this point, the Government in 1872 purchased the entire block bounded by Eighth and Ninth, Olive and Locust streets, and upon plans adopted by the supervising architect at Washington, the work of excavating was commenced.

Great difficulties were experienced in getting satisfactory foundations. Some 4000 or 5000 piles had to be driven in the too soft soil, in order to make it more solid; upon this the erection of the building was started, the lower portion was built of Missouri red granite, and the part above ground of gray granite from the East.

The rest is composed mainly of iron, so that the building will be entirely fire-proof.

The estimated cost was 4,000,000, but owing to delaysin appropriations and other causes it is thought that when finished, it will cost at least $5,000,000.

But then St. Louis will have a valuable addition to her achitecture and a Post Office worthy of her size and future greatness.

The mails will be distributed in the basement of the building, and this being on a level with the tunnel (where all eastern trains pass) it will be of great advantage for handling incoming and outgoing mails.

The engraving on the preceding page shows the building in its present stage, and in future editions it is proposed to keep up with its progress.

his building, designed by Messrs. Lee & Annan, is of modern Italian style. The first story being of Roman Doric order, and the upper stories of Composite order. The third street façade is broken or diversified in the central portion by isolated columns, extending throughout the several stories, and culminating at the main cornice in an imposing pediment. The wings at either side and the Pine and Chestnut street fronts are treated with pilasters corresponding in their details and carvings with the columns.

The section of the building containing the Grand Hall is marked by semi-circle head windows, and is separated from the "office" building by open courts.

The character of the building is one of simple dignity, depending more upon correct proportion and elegant detail for effect, than upon meretricious ornament and useless contortion of outline. In this it correctly represents the character of the business men who daily assemble within its walls.

One of the most serious drawbacks that detracts from the outward appearance of the building, is the narrowness of Third Street, one of the oldest, as it is also one of the most compactly built streets in the city. The building committee partially obviated the trouble by dedicating to public use a largely increased width of pavement, removing in some degree the confined appearance so objectionable.

The grand hall of this Merchant's Exchange has no where in this country a rival in point of magnitude and architectural beauty: it embraces 226 feet in length, 96 feet in width and 79 feet in height, it is lighted from all sides by 61 windows, arranged in two lines, the lower row being 10 feet by 26 in the clear opening, and the upper 10 feet by 23.

A light gallery, supported by enriched brackets and consoles, extends around the room.

This gallery is for the use of visitors who desire to view from above the multitude of merchants and traders engaged in their respective avocations. The stranger who knows any member of the Exchange can, by application be introduced on the floor of the hall, but the gallery is of free access to all.

The ceiling which measures 21696 square feet was decorated by Messrs. Beeker & Sciepcevich. These artists divided the ceiling in three great panels, the middle one filled with figure groupings, typifying America with its teeming products, and the two others with designs emblematic of the nationalities of Europe, Asia and Africa.

The central figure of the middle panel represents the "West" or rather its metropolitan city "St. Louis" personated by a beautiful star-crowned girl. The artists have admirably carried into effect the suggestions of the architects and have employed their colors with singular felicity. The drawing throughout, and especially the foliated work, is beautifully easy and graceful and a unity of design pervades the entire work.

FOUR COURTS.

CITY JAIL.

This commodious edifice—situated on Clark Ave, between Eleventh and Twelfth streets, bears some resemblance in structure to the famous palace of the Louvre in Paris. It is built of Stone, Iron and Brick, making a combination substantial enough to defy the footsteps of time.

Between the hours of 9 A.M. to 3 P.M. strangers in the City, or respectable Citizens, may be admitted to view the Jail, but they are not allowed to speak to prisoners.

One is admitted to a covered enclosure semi-circular in form, surrounded on its circular side by a triple row of cells.

From the middle of the semi-circle the jailer can look into the various cells and watch the movements of their occupants. Running around the enclosure, about three feet from the cells, is a small gutter which the visitor is prohibited to cross. Near the door of entrance is a tower which is mounted by an armed patrol during the hours the prisoners take their daily exercise. From a window at the back may be obtained a view of the gallows in the outer yard. In the basement, reached by a flight of steps near the front entrance are the cells where are confined the culprits arrested for petty offenses, who are waiting for their trial in the police court.

In this building are located: the Criminal Court, Court of Criminal Correction, Police Court, Chief of Police's office, Coroner's office, City Marshal's office and Jailer's office.

MORGUE.

The house of the dead stands just back of the Jail at the corner of Spruce and 12th streets. Here behind a glass partition are three marble slabs, on which are deposited the unknown dead, awaiting identification and burial.

PUBLIC BUILDINGS.

COURT HOUSE.

From whatever direction one may come he will be sure to fall upon the sight of this well-proportioned and handsome piece of Doric architecture, the erection of which commenced in 1838. The work progressed slowly in the beginning, and after many changes made in the original plans, it was finally completed in 1862, to the great satisfaction of the St. Louisians who always point it out to visitors as one of the ornaments of the city.

The interior of the handsome dome is decorated by fresco paintings representing the early days of the city. On a clear day by ascending the dome, the best view of the city and vicinity may be obtained. In fact the view will repay the trouble of making the ascent. Located between 4th and 5th, and between Market and Chestnut streets.

The Cathedral is the oldest Church in St. Louis. It was erected from 1832 to 1834 upon the site of the ancient First Church and cemetery, built by the First Settlers of St. Louis. CHARITABLE INSTITUTIONS.

CITY HOSPITAL.

Located at the Junction of Lafayette Avenue and Linn Street.

To reach it, take the cars on Pine, bet. 4th and 5th Sts., those whose signs read Union Depot and Lafayette Park.

CHARITABLE INSTITUTIONS.

Charitable Institutions, for nowhere in the United States and probably in the world is the system of public and private Charities, so complete as in St.

Louis.

To commence with Hospitals: There are a dozen institutions in which persons of both sexes and of all ages and nationalities daily find refuge in time of sickness and its attendant suffering.

These Hospitals have ample accommodations; are large, well ventilated and cleanly kept.

Large grounds surround them, and they are altogether calculated to restore health to those who are deprived of the comforts of home.

CITY HOSPITAL.

The most important of our charitable institutions is the City Hospital, a view of which is on the opposite page. It was built by the city some 35 years ago and at first consisted of only the front building, but with the extraordinary growth of the city other additions were necessitated, in order that its capacity might correspond with the needs of the increased population. As it now stands, accommodations are provided for about 600 patients, but the usual number of cases on hand average 400; among those are representatives from all the civilized nations of the earth. Not only every state in the Union, but Europe, Asia and Africa furnish their quota. This fact shows without a doubt what a point of concentration is St. Louis.

The hospital is situated on a high, airy location, its cleanliness is the admiration of all visitors and its neatly laid out grounds are pleasant to the eye. In short no pains are spared to make the hospital attractive, and for this much credit is due to the officer in charge.

INSANE ASYLUM.

HE above engraving represents the City Insane Asylum, is situated on Arsenal Street Road, a short distance from Tower Grove Park and Shaw's Garden.

It is a large, well-proportioned and very imposing edifice. Situated on an elevated spot, standing "solitary and alone" in its grandeur, it may be seen, a prominent object, for miles around.

The interior arrangements will be found to fulfill the expectations aroused by the appearance of the exterior. It is divided into two departments: the western half being occupied by the women and the eastern by the men. Every attention is paid to the comfort of the inmates, and while it is sad to contemplate the affliction of God's creatures who are deprived of the most precious of all boons, the gift of reason, it is a source of gratification to reflect that their bodily wants are so well supplied, and that every effort is made to soften as far as possible the hardship of 'neir lot.

POOR HOUSE.

THE Poor House is situated some 500 yards beyond the insane Asylum, at the junction of Arsenal street Road and the old Manchester Road. It is in this establishment that the city of St. Louis takes care of and supports the class generally called "Paupers," those who from deblity, old age, misfortunes or imbecility of mind are not able to support themselves, and become dependent upon the charity of the public for their existence.

While here, they are required to perform such labor about the building as is consistent with their strength. They are provided with wholesome food; the laws of cleanliness are strictly enforced, and the location of the institution is pleasant and salubrious; these circumstances combined unite to make the City Farm a refuge where even honest poverty need not be ashamed to dwell.

MARINE HOSPITAL.

HE above engraving is a view of the Marine Hospital buildings, a place where river-men are taken care of, when they are sick, or when they have met with accidents in the discharge of their duties.

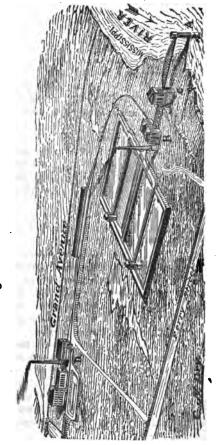

Located on a beautiful spot, overlooking the River and surrounding country, it is certainly well adapted to its purposes.

This Hospital is situated in the southern portion of the city. To reach it the visitor must take Fifth street cars going south, (St. Louis R. R. Co.) and ask the conductor to be put down at Marine ave., when a walk of three minutes will bring him to the gates of the institution.

Water System of St. Louis.

BIRD'S EYE VIEW OF WATER WORKS.

The water system of St. Louis is one of the most complete to be found in this country.

The Water Works are situated in the upper part of the City, three miles from the Court House, at the junction of Grand Avenue and the Mississippi river.

Visitors are admitted at all times, no permission being necessary to visit the Works, but the visitor is required to register his name in a book kept for that purpose.

These extensive Works comprise: 1st. Lower Service B, C, (see the engraving,) which has three low pressure engines to pump the water from the River Tower, A, into the settling reservoirs, where the water is allowed to settle from 8 to 36 hours according to its state of cleanliness.

Engines Nos. 1 and 2, of the Lower Service are capable of pumping 16,500,000 gallons each per day, and engine No. 3, 25,000,000 gallons per day.

These engines pump the water from the settling reservoirs and force it up into the Water Tower which is situated on Grand ave., at the junction of 14th Street. The Water Tower is 160 feet in height, being 76 feet higher than the Compton Hil Reservoir.

From this Tower the water is distributed all over the city, through 188 miles of pipes, ranging from 36 to 3 inches in diameter.

One main pipe 36 inches in diameter carries water to the Compton Hill reservoir, located on Grand avenue near Lafayette avenue.

This Storage Reservoir is 800 feet long, 400 feet wide, and 23 deep; it has a capacity of 60,000,000 gallons, which would be sufficient in case of accident at the Water Works to supply the City for three days, the average daily consumption being 22,000,000 gallons.

Strangers object generally to the muddy appearance of the Mississippi River water. This appearance is caused by the mixture of light sandy particles, but on its being allowed to settle, the water becomes comparatively clear and very palatable. It is said to keep longer and sweeter on a sea voyage, than the water of perhaps any other stream.

PLAN OF FOREST PARK.

DESCRIPTION OF FOREST PARK.

Extensive Parks, with well improved avenues and boulevards, lend tone and attraction to a city, and being open to the use of all citizens alike, are a source of neverfailing enjoyment to poor as well as rich. They create a laudable emulation in the adorning by trees and flowers of the homes of all classes and exert a salutary effect upon the character of a people.

The fine landscape and scenery, the extent, 1372 acres, the location and superb views, make Forest Park, the great park of St. Louis. It has six miles of parkways paved in a most substantial manner, and 13 miles of graded but unpaved roads. Its roads and lawns are drained by many miles of vitrified stone pipe. It has 20 bridges, some of them elegant and expensive structures. It has an ample supply of pure clear water for its lakes and other purposes, collected from deeply-seated wells in a caisson sunk to the depth of 31 feet, and forced into the lakes through graceful fountains.

It has a fertile and genial soil, unsurpa sed for the production of grass, flowers, shrubs and trees. The whole is crowned by a forest of noble growth, supplemented by more than 100,000 rare trees from the nurseries of our own county and from those of adjoining states.

To reach the park the most enjoyable way is to go in a carriage; another way is to take the train of the North-Western Rail Road which starts from Union Depot, and passes through the park.

LAFAYETTE PARK.

It has been often said of Lafayette Park, that if it were set in the midst of Switzerland or some other part of Europe, tourists would rave over it, as a gem of natural beauty and a triumph of landscape gardening. Nothwitstanding its absence of foreign flavor, we are happy in having such a spot in our midst.

The Park comprises 30 acres of artistically laid out grounds, diversified by gentle hillocks and pleasant valleys. Well-gravelled walks extend in all directions, and mossgrown rocks form inviting retreats.

In the middle of the Park is an Artificial lake, with water fowl salling on its glassy surface and a plashing fountain in the centre. Here for a small sum, boats may be hired for a row on the water. Near the lake is a colossal statue of Benton, Missouri's greatest statesman. This statue is the work of Miss Hosmer, the American sculptress.

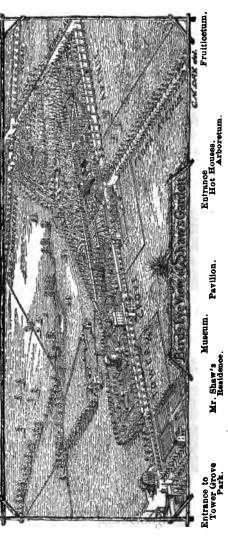

On the south side is a copy of Houdon's celebrated statue of Washington. On the east and west sides are rustic bridges, caves, fountains and grottoes. Flower plats abound, and their gay colors charm the eye, while their sweet odors fill the air with fragrance.

Here on pleasant afternoons may be seen troops of romping children. On Thursday afternoons at 4 o'clock, commencing from May 1st a band of music "discourses sweet sounds" to thousands of people.

To reach the Park take the yellow cars on Fourth street, marked Lafayette Park; or those marked Union Depot and Lafayette Park, which start from the corner of Fourth and Pine streets.

SHAW'S GARDEN.

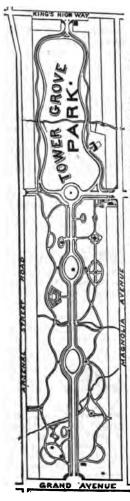

A trip to Shaw s Garden should be one of the first objects in a stranger's visit, as these beautiful Botanical Gardens are considered the finest in the United States. They contain about 40 acres, which are planted with almost every known species of vegetation. The walks and hot-houses are kept with the utmost neatness, requiring the constant attention of 35 gardeners. The large conservatories on the north side contain the tropical plants; among these special attention is directed to a tree of great size, a very fine specimen of the Pandamu. Utilus, 25 feet in height and 18 in breadth.

Standing on the terrace of the hot house, one looks up through an avenue ter inating in the summer residence of Mr. Shaw. Midway between this residence and the conservatory is a Pavillion, from which may be obtained a charming view of the surrounding scenery.

One portion of the ground containing 6 acres is reserved for the Fruiticetum, or Experimental Fruit Garden; another of 25 acres is the Arboretum, planted with every tree known to the American climate, properly labeled and grouped with such systematic promisculty, that they would seem to be placed there by the hand of chance, and not of art.

These gardens have been under cultivation, under the exclusive superintendence of Mr. Shaw, since 1857. They are maintained at his own expense, and he has signified his intention of bequerthing them to the city at his death. They are open daily free of charge. On Sundays a card of admission is required which may be obtained on application to Mr. Shaw, at his city residence, corner of 7th and Locust Sts.

Too much cannot be said in admiration of the patient perseverance, the untiring energy and the munificent generosity which have combined to make these gardens what they are. The love of flowers is implanted in every breast, and he who has devoted nearly half a lifetime to planning, arranging and perfecting their growth as a gift to his fellow men, is a be nefactor to his race.

TOWER GROVE PARK.

HIS Park is situated in the southwestern part of the City about 300 yards from Shaws' Garden. It was donated by Mr. Shaw to the City of St. Louis in the year 1868, and contains about 350 acres. It is one and a half mile in length, and one-quarter mile in width. There are about 4 miles of carriage roads, and 4 miles of gravelled walks for pedestrians.

The Park is furnished with a music stand, and here on Sunday afternoons a band holds forth. The display of beauty, fashion and stylish turnouts on these occasions makes a brilliant panorama.

The Park is well laid out with native and foreign shade trees, and adorned with bridges and Summer houses. In the west end is a pond, by the side of which is a mimic ruin of an ancient fortrees.

A yearly appropriation of $25,000 is made by the City to maintain this Park properly.

finement of the inhabitants of a City may be judged by the condition of its cemeteries, St. Louis does not stand in the background in that respect; for the care bestowed on its numerous and beautiful resting places of the dead, is of the most praiseworthy character. Fine walks and drives intersect them, while forest trees and carefully tended flowers embellish them.

Calvary, the Catholic Cemetery, adjoins Bellefontaine; but the principal entrance is about three-fifths of a mile distant.

In point of size, Bellefontaine ranks first; but both are adorned with many beautiful and costly monuments.

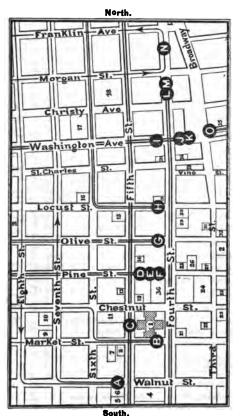

A card of admission is required to visit Bellefontaine, and this may be obtained on application at the Cemetery office, second floor, N. E. corner 4th and Olive streets.

To reach Cemeteries, take cars on 5th street going north, which connectat Bremen avenue with the cars going directly to their gates.

There are about twenty-five other cemeteries of minor importance located in the suburbs of the City.
